Birds of a Feather

A group of intrepid bird watchers have set out from the South of England for a holiday in Scotland. This group of "twitchers" have had a very successful time and spotted 30 different birds. All are mentioned in the following letter. Can you find them?

Dear Ed

Started our journey to Scotland early on Saturday morning. Bill bagged first stint and took it easy on our way through Berkshire. Had arranged to meet Jack and Ernest at the Bell Inn, Eton at 7.30 am. Jack Dawling was his usual dapper self, while Ernest Orkby was rather scruffy.

I left Jack to navigate and took a back seat next to Ernest. One chatted a lot and the time passed quite swiftly. In no time we had passed Birmingham. The rain set in near Manchester and the spray was a grave nuisance. We stopped for lunch at a quaint old pub and sampled the local brew, a very pleasant bitter named Merlin's Magic Brew. After lunch, Bill handed over the driving to Jack and I decided to steal an hours sleep in the back. We drove on, passing Ullswater on our way to the hotel at Penrith. I watched that James Bond movie, Goldeneye yet again before settling down to sleep. We experienced a tremendous storm, and at about midnight, in gale-force winds a large oak tree crashed down in the grounds of the hotel. Next morning we continued on our journey to Scotland.

We arrived at our cottage, which is very remote with no other one for miles around. It is situated in as fine a glen as I have ever seen. Set on the edge of a loch, soaring pine forest with rushing stream and heather clad hills. A ruined castle overlooks the loch, although there is little now left of the main walls. There is also an old saw mill nearby which had also fallen into disrepair but it is now renovated and the new owners have made it very smart inside and out.

Yesterday, we went down to the loch and took a boat trip across. Bill and I sat in the stern. The others sat at the front. Later we travelled to see the local band of drummers and pipers performing. We then enjoyed an excellent meal, which has put at least a couple of inches on the waistline. Absolutely nothing is wanting from this holiday and we shall be sad to leave. I must say, bird watching is the most relaxing hobby. Anyway, will sign off for now.

Best regards from all

Ardelle
